CHINO HILLS — With her professional skill as a marketing consultant and ties to the local business community, Angela Turner decided to become chairwoman of the Relay for Life event in Chino Hills this year.

Turner is the owner of Launch Lady, LLC, a full-service marketing consulting company with clients that include cities, small businesses, national cable and magazine companies. Launch Lady was formed in May 2007.

Prior to launching the company, Turner held a senior marketing position at Sony Pictures Television for nine years and has held various marketing positions at Twentieth Television, FOX Broadcasting, and Turner Broadcasting.

As chairwoman, Turner said she was focused on the growth of the Relay for Life event in the community, which took place June 28 and 29, at Chino Hills High School.

This year about 350 people participated in the event which raises money to find a cure for cancer through donations. Relay For Life participants took turns walking around the circular track for 24 hours and also camped out at the high school stadium.

“Relay For Life is important because it is the largest fundraiser of the American Cancer Society,” she said. “Relay is about celebrating those diagnosed with cancer, remembering loved ones lost to the disease, and fighting back against cancer through advocacy, research, and lifestyle.”

Turner lives with her husband Ronald Turner in Chino Hills and two stepchildren.
